Reducing the Stigma of Mental Health Through Active Support and Listening

An individual's path to experiencing homelessness can oftentimes be accompanied by a host of other concerns. Questions of where they will lay their head that night can be masked by worries of food insecurity, transportation troubles and even mental health issues.

a mental health coordinator to work with guests in our shelters, as well as our Early Childhood Education programs.

We had the opportunity to chat with mental health coordinator Leslie Wilcox about her new role and its impact in uplifting both children and adults experiencing homelessness.
